President Ronald Reagan - Official Portrait

Tomorrow, nearly 250,000 pages from the Reagan administration will be released for the first time.

The release resulted from an April 9 letter to the National Archives and Records Administration from President Obama's legal Counsel, Gregory Craig. The letter ordered the release of the records which had earlier been held up by the Bush administration. President Bush never decided if he should assert 'executive privilege' effectively preventing their release.

In contrast, President Obama decided not to exert executive privilege in the 30 day period set by his January 21 Executive Order on presidential records (EO 13489).

According to Politico, the pages to be released contain information on Reagan's,

“presidential briefing papers, speechwriting research materials and declassified foreign policy records.”

The papers are important since President Reagan often included references to extraterrestrial life in his speeches. These extraterrestrial references eventually became part of a tug of war between President Reagan who tried to include them in speeches, and staffers who tried to exclude them.

Monday's release of further Reagan presidential records may shed light on President Reagan's fixation on the reality of extraterrestrial life, and why he was convinced this could unite the world. More intriguingly, they may yield clues into whether he received a secret briefing on UFOs and extraterrestrial life.

During his presidency, Ronald Reagan made numerous speeches referring to the existence of extraterrestrial life and how this could unify the world.

In a November 1985 Summit Meeting in Geneva with the Soviet Union's Secretary General Mikhail Gorbachev, Reagan said the following according to the U.S. State Department:

Reagan said that while the General Secretary was speaking, he had been thinking of various problems being discussed at the talks.

He said that previous to the General Secretary's remarks, he had been telling Foreign Minister Shevardnadze (who was sitting to the President's right) that if the people of the world were to find out that there was some alien life form that was going to attack the Earth approaching on Halley's Comet, then that knowledge would unite all the peoples of the world.

According to UFO and the Presidents researcher Grant Cameron, there was no record of this extraterrestrial comment in the speech writers' files, and he concluded Reagan was an ad-libbing.

Later in December 1985, Reagan spoke at Falston High School and said:

I couldn't help but - when you stop to think that we're all God's children, wherever we live in the world, I couldn't help but say to him (Gorbachev) just how easy his task and mine might be if suddenly there was a threat to this world from some other species from another planet outside in the universe.

We'd forget all the little local differences that we have between our countries and we would find out once and for all that we really are all human beings here on this Earth together.

Again, Cameron found no record of the extraterrestrial remark in speechwriter files and concluded Reagan was ad-libbing.

The most famous alien comment by Reagan was on September 21, 1987 before the United Nations General Assembly:

In our obsession with antagonisms of the moment, we often forget how much unites all the members of humanity. Perhaps we need some outside, universal threat to make us recognize this common bond.

I occasionally think how quickly our differences worldwide would vanish if we were facing an alien threat from outside of this world. And yet I ask - is not an alien force already among us?"

Cameron notes that Reagan succeeded in having these comments re-installed into his speech after they had been deleted by staffers.

Reagan's views about extraterrestrial life were not dismissed by the Kremlin. Gorbachev did eventually respond in a serious way to Reagan's scenario of an extraterrestrial invasion.

In February 1997, Gorbachev responded to Reagan's comments at their 1985 Geneva Summit.

At our meeting in Geneva, the U.S. President said that if the earth faced an invasion by extraterrestrials, the United States and the Soviet Union would join forces to repel such an invasion. I shall not dispute the hypothesis, although I think it's early yet to worry about such an intrusion.

Also in May 1990, after Reagan had left office, Gorbachev said:

"The phenomenon of UFOs does exist and it must be treated seriously."

The numerous references to extraterrestrials in Reagan's speeches and the international dialogue this created raise many serious questions. The Reagan administration took great care to vet his speeches in accord to strict guidelines.

Cameron notes that despite,

"these strict guidelines many UFO references were still found in Reagan speeches and comments. The question is why they were there." .

A final question to consider is whether President Reagan received a classified briefing on extraterrestrial life.

According to an alleged briefing document, Reagan was given an official briefing between March 6-8, 1981 by various national security officials that was highly classified.

The Reagan Presidential briefing document is yet to be substantiated and has been widely dismissed by most UFO researchers.

The alleged briefing document, however, does raise the possibility that Reagan was given a briefing, and some of what is in the document is based on fact. Monday's release of additional presidential files will help resolve unanswered questions about Reagan's views concerning extraterrestrial life, and why these appeared so frequently in his speeches.

If President Reagan was indeed secretly briefed about extraterrestrials, then clues may be revealed about the officials involved and what he was told.

Reagan Records & Space Command Antigravity Fleet

On April 13, the National Archive Records Administration made available almost 250,000 pages of documents from President Reagan's administration. It will take several months for researchers to read through the documents.

The released material may yield insight into a curious comment found in President Reagan's Diary.

Cover of The Reagan Diaries (Harper Collins, 2007)

The entry for Tuesday, June 11, 1985 (page 334) reads:

Lunch with 5 top space scientist. It was fascinating. Space truly is the last frontier and some of the developments there in astronomy etc. are like science fiction, except they are real. I learned that our shuttle capacity is such that we could orbit 300 people.

This is curious since the Space Shuttle holds a maximum of eight people and only five were built for space flight.

Even if all five took off fully loaded it would be impossible to place and maintain 300 astronauts in orbit. Was Reagan revealing the existence of a highly classified space program that could accommodate hundreds of astronauts in orbit? Apparently so according to dozens of military and corporate whistleblowers. Hidden within one of the ten unified combatant commands of the U.S. military, Strategic Command, is a highly classified fleet of aircraft carrier sized antigravity vehicles that operate in outer space.

The United States has organized its military forces into ten unified combatant commands respectively led by a single four star General or Admiral who reports directly to the Secretary of Defense. Six of the unified commands span the globe in terms of different geographical areas. In addition, there are four functional commands where specialized military activities are run by a single "Combatant Commander."

From 1985 to 2002 Space Command was responsible for outer space operations by the U.S. military. In June 2002, Space Command merged with another of the functional commands – Strategic Command which is responsible for a range of space, satellite, missile, nuclear and intelligence activities.

Rumors that the U.S. has a highly classified fleet of antigravity vehicles have circulated for years.

On March 23, 1993, at an engineering conference in Los Angeles, Dr. Ben Rich former CEO of Lockheed's Skunkworks, showed a slide with a black disk headed for space and said:

"We now have the technology to take ET home".

Corporate and military whistleblowers have come forward to claim first hand knowledge of classified space vehicles using antigravity technology such as the Aurora and TR-3B.

In his book, The Hunt for Zero Point, Jane's Defense Weekly analyst Nick Cook writes about the Aurora:

"there has been speculation since the late 1980s about the existence of a secret replacement for the Blackbird, a mythical plane called the Aurora that supposedly flew twice as fast and on the edges of space."

(p. 14)

Other whistleblowers such as Edgar Fouche, a former contractor with the Department of Defense, have come forward to claim that the Blackbird's [or SR-71] replacement, the Aurora actually comprises two types of hypersonic aircraft used for space flight.

He said:

"The Aurora comprises the SR-75 capable of speeds above Mach 5, and acts as a mother ship for the SR-74 that can travel at speeds of Mach 18 or more into space to deliver satellites."

More significant is the large black triangular vehicle, the TR-3B that Fouche claims generates an intense magnetic field that reduces its weight by 89 percent. He says that the TR-3B uses the Biefeld-Brown effect (created by large electrostatic charges) to reduce its weight so that more conventional propulsion systems such as scramjets can give it amazing speeds. This would be well above Mach 18 that he claims is the speed of the SR-74.

Fouche claims the TR-3B is 600 feet across which would make it similar in size to an aircraft carrier.

Circumstantial evidence points to the existence of a secret space fleet of antigravity vehicles.

- President Ronald Reagan's startlingly Diary entry for June 11, 1985, for example, reveals a space shuttle capacity that could launch 300 people into orbit.
- Also, on August 6, 2007, for example, NASA awarded the "Human Spaceflight Support Team" for assisting NASA vehicles in avoided space debris.
- The support team was part of USAF Space Command which is publicly stated to be the major military command providing space forces for U.S. Strategic Command.

The citation... highlights the team for its exceptional support in keeping the space shuttle, International Space Station and its crews safe from the dangers of orbital debris, spacecraft collisions and other inherent hazards of orbit operations.

However, neither the USAF Space Command nor Strategic Command is publicly known to have any kind of space vehicle that would assist the Space Shuttle or International Space Station from orbital dangers.

Normally, both NASA vehicles would require gradual orbital corrections that would take much time and be insufficient to deal with an immediate threat. According to Ted Twietmeyer, the citation is circumstantial evidence for the existence of antigravity vehicles with advanced particle beam weapons that could remove orbital debris from the path of NASA vehicles.

The idea that a secret space fleet exists that can intervene to assist the Space Shuttle or International Space Station is also supported by the testimony of a former NASA employee.

Clark McClelland worked as a SpaceCraft operator for Space Shuttle missions during 1989-1992.

On one occasion he claims to have witnessed an eight to nine foot tall astronaut and what appeared to be a delta winged antigravity vehicle nearby (below illustration).

Since McClelland knew all astronauts in the NASA space shuttle program he assumed that the very tall being in a space suit was an extraterrestrial.

While such a possibility can't be excluded, the being and the nearby delta shaped vehicle may in fact have been part of a classified Space Fleet attached to U.S. Strategic Command.

Finally, the idea of a secret space fleet using advanced technologies was boosted by a British hacker, Gary McKinnon, who faces extradition to the U.S. for hacking into U.S. government and military computers. McKinnon claims that he came across secret Pentagon and NASA files that contained a list of 'non-terrestrial officers', and a spreadsheet detailing 'fleet-to-fleet transfers'.

Could the tall being depicted with the two Space Shuttle astronauts actually belong to a group of "non-terrestrial officers" that periodically give assistance to Space Shuttle programs through the US Air Force's Space Command?

Based on the available evidence from a range of sources, President Reagan's 1985 Diary entry is a frank acknowledgement of a classified space program that can transport and accommodate hundreds of astronauts. The Diary entry suggests he received one or more briefings on the topic. Important clues may emerge from the recently released Reagan records about Strategic Command's classified space fleet.

More significantly, the public may soon learn about the advanced antigravity technologies that have been secretly developed and used for decades to fly military astronauts into deep space.
